AMUSEMENT NOTES.

Lyman H. Howe's Pictures Next Wednesday Evening.

Two notable features of Lyman H. Howe's new program at the opera house on Wednesday, February 10 show the newest—Russia. The pictures illustrate the achievements of a mighty past in ancient Egypt and those of the present in modern Russia. Both are weirdly beautiful—but with a beauty as different as black is from white. Every opportunity was seized by Mr. Howe's photographer to transfer the real Egypt and the real Russia to American audiences. The Egypt series possesses a peculiar fascination because the land is unsurpassed, historically and in pictorial possibilities. The pictures of Egypt inspire the imagination, not only because of their strange beauty, but because the country is so rich in history and yet shrouded in mystery. Those marvels of the world—the Pyramids and Sphinx—by their very immensity speak eloquently of a civilization compared with which Russia is but a thing of yesterday. The pictures of Russia are no less interesting—but in an entirely different way. It is the difference between the mute, majestic Sphinx and the imposing Kremlin. The difference between the amazing temple ruins of Thebes of by-gone ages and the Moscow of today, which, with its fairyland of cupolas, spires, and pinnacles, seems almost supernatural. The program comprises many other subjects of equal interest.

NO MORE CALHOUN JURORS.

Eight Men So Far Accepted—More Than 500 Testaments Examined.

San Francisco, Feb. 3.—Twenty-two citizens summoned as prospective jurors in the trial of Patrick Calhoun, president of the United railroad, who is charged with bribery, were disqualified during the hours of actual court proceedings Monday. At no time did it seem likely that there would be an addition to the eight jurors temporarily accepted. More than five hundred testaments have been summoned to attend court during a period of three weeks, and more than two hundred have been actually examined by the attorneys.

RANDOLPH

Death of Charles Bover, a Civil War Veteran.

The death of Charles Bover occurred at his home on Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock after an illness of weeks with Bright's disease which was attended by much suffering. Deceased was 61 years of age and a member of U. S. Grant post and until failing health obliged him to give up many of the more active duties. He was an interested and loyal member and a regular attendant upon the meetings. He was a member of Co. C 6th Vermont regiment, serving acceptably his term in the army. Deceased is survived by a wife, one son, Alfred Bover, and three daughters, Mrs. Celia Raymond, Mrs. Fred Raymond of Randolph Center and Mrs. George Roberts of this village. Two stepchildren also survive him, Mrs. Lewis Tatro of Randolph Center, Levi Raymond of Greenfield, Mass., a grandson, The funeral will be held Thursday morning from the Catholic church of which deceased was a devoted communicant, the U. S. Grant post and W. R. C. attending.

Miss Christine Stewart of Williams-town is a guest this week at Charles Griswold's.

Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Dickerman were in town Tuesday calling upon friends before their departure in about a week for Vancouver, B. C.

Charles Bent, who has been at work in Boston for months as superintendent of a gang of men employed in bridge building, is now at his home in this village for a short vacation with his family.

C. W. Gates of Franklin was in town this week and appointed J. B. Wells as county road commissioner. Mr. Wells has recovered from his late serious illness and is now about the streets and is again taking up his business with much of the old vigor and energy.

W. H. Holmes, who has passed his 97th birthday fell in the room of his home on Saturday and fractured one hip since which time he has been suffering and remains in an unconscious state. It is hardly probable that he will rally from this accident although he is possessed of a strong constitution. Mrs. D. E. Godfrey from Boston, Mass., arrived here on Sunday to assist in the care of him. Mr. Holmes is one of the oldest persons in town.

SOUTH ROYALTON

Work has begun in the new glove factory.

Mrs. Lavilla Greene left for West Concord Saturday, where she will care for her sister, Mrs. G. R. Parmenter.

The high school gave a play "Our Folks" on Friday evening to a good-sized audience. The proceeds amounted to about $25 and goes in a fund to enable the senior class to enjoy a trip to Washington in the spring.

HIS COTTAGE ROBBED.

Dr. Strobell of Rutland Misses Many Articles of Furnishing.

Rutland, Feb. 3.—Dr. C. W. Strobell of Cottage street has discovered that his cottage on Avalon beach, Lake Bomoseen, was broken into some time last week and a quantity of bedding and men's clothes stolen. The cottage was broken into once before this winter, but nothing was stolen at that time. Entrance was gained by breaking a pane of glass in a window on the lower floor. A nearby farmer, who keeps an eye on the 14 cottages on the beach, discovered the broken window and boarded it up.

The second entrance was gained by removing the boards from the window. The thieves packed all their plunder in a trunk and probably dragged it off on the ice. Recent snow storms have covered their tracks, however, and it is impossible to tell what direction they took. A Castleton constable who has been reading "Sherlock Holmes" believes that the burglars were not married men, because they did not take any woman's clothes.

IN LOCAL MARKETS

Dressed Pork Reported Very Firm To-day

BUTTER IS MORE PLENTY

And Prices on the Product Are Easy—Ricker Reports Hogs and Veal Firm and Beef a Shade Lower—The Other Quotations.

Barre, Vt., Feb. 3, 1909.

Dressed pork very firm. Butter more plenty and prices easy.

Wholesale quotations: Dressed pork—8½¢@9¢. Dressed veal—9¢@10¢. Lamb—11¢@12¢. Chicken—17¢@18¢. Fowls—14¢@15¢. Butter—Creamery, 31¢; dairy, 30¢. Fresh eggs—33¢@34¢. Potatoes—Steady at 70¢ per bushel.

RICKER'S MARKET.

Reports Hogs and Veal as Firm and Beef a Shade Lower.

St. Johnsbury, Feb. 3.—Ricker's market reports hogs and veal as firm. Beef is a shade lower. The receipts for the week are as follows:

Poultry—9¢@10¢. Lamb—20, 3¢@6¢. Hogs—60, 5¢@6¢. Cattle—85, 3¢@4½¢. Calves—125, 3¢@6¢. Milch cows—$20@45.

IN BOSTON MARKETS.

Eggs Feel the Effects of the Cold Weather This Week.

Boston, Feb. 3.—The local market for eggs feels the effect of the cold weather. The receipts are still fairly large, but the advices from shipping points state that collections are very small and receipts during the rest of the week are expected to be very light. The current demand is quiet, but as western markets are firm with stronger tendencies and the indications point to small receipts, prices here are very firm, though not as high as they are in some outside markets.

The tone of the market is rather unsettled, but it is felt that any immediate change in prices will be upward, although it frequently happens around this season that stocks may be sold down to bare boards and the prices not advance. There is no change in cheese or butter. Fresh butter is in large supply and easy in the lack of much demand, but storage goods sell well, and as stocks are steadily diminishing, the prices are well sustained. Cheese holds firm under moderate offerings and a fairly good demand.

Quotations follow: Butter—Fancy northern creamery, tubs 31¢@32¢, boxes and prints 34¢, western ash tubs 29¢@30¢, fancy storage creamery 30¢@31¢, dairy butter 27¢@28¢. Cheese—New York twins, fancy 15¢@15½¢, fair to good 13¢@13½¢, Vermont twins, fancy 13½¢@14¢, fair to good 12½¢@13¢.

Eggs—Fancy henery 36¢@37¢, choice eastern 35¢@36¢, fresh western 33¢@36¢.

WINDSOR DOCTOR DEAD.

Dr. Deane Richmond Who Had a Large Practice.

Windsor, Feb. 3.—Dr. Deane Richmond, who has practiced medicine for over 25 years in this town, died at his home on State street Monday night of tuberculosis. He took a trip around the world about a year ago and last fall went to the Grand Banks for his health, but stayed there only a short time. Since coming home he had failed rapidly and the end came not unexpected. He was in his 47th year, a native of Woodstock and son of Dr. J. S. Richmond, who practiced for many years in that town and Windsor. Dr. Richmond had been physician at the Vermont state prison for some years and had a large general practice. He leaves a wife and five children, also two brothers and one sister in Windsor.

MRS. H. L. GREEN

The President's Ride

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

I was sitting in my quarters one evening after retreat when my friend Charlie St. Clair came in with a woe-begone expression on his face and, throwing himself into an easy chair, heaved a deep sigh. Charlie was one of the handsomest men I ever knew and withal the most lovable. He and I had been classmates and chums at West Point, had served together in the Spanish-American war and were now stationed at the same post.

"What's up, Charlie?" I asked. "Well," I said sympathetically, "don't you think you'll be able to stand it?" "I know I won't."

Charlie was lazy-lazy on drill, lazy in quarters, lazy in social life, lazy everywhere except in battle. It required a fight to put energy into him, but it did. His case always reminded me of a prominent Confederate general in this—the general when an engagement was coming on never could settle down to the work before him without riding out to the firing line. Then he would ride back ready to listen to orders. Charlie lost all his indolence under the rattle of rifles and the boom of big guns, besides becoming brave as a lion.

"I tell you what you do, Charlie," I suggested—"put in all your time between now and the ride exercising. Get off some of your surplus flesh and harden your muscles."

"Oh, I'm too big!"

That told the story exactly. He was a big man, and the accumulation of inertia had got ahead of him. I persuaded him to let me train him, and I worked with him right up to the day of the ride. But it was no use. I never could get him up in the morning. He would eat anything he fancied. In short, he wouldn't train. The consequence was that when he started on the ride he was sure to fail. My heart sank when we left for the starting point, but I encouraged him so far as possible. I was to take the ride myself and hoped to stimulate him.

I told him I might find a way to pull him through, but he shook his head despondently. We hadn't gone ten miles before I saw the game was up for Charlie. From the very start he looked tired, and every mile we rode he lost breath. The sweat was rolling down his fat cheeks, and he was the picture of melancholy. We had gone over about half the distance when, making an effort, he spurred beside me, puffing, reeling, a bluish white hue on his face, and told me he was going to drop out. We were riding past a country place at the time, and I saw him turn in at the gate. That was the last I saw of him on the ride.

On reaching my quarters the next day I found an order to go to France to be present at the army maneuvers. I was gone six weeks and on my return received a note from Charlie saying that he had been unable to leave the house where he had taken refuge and wished me to go to him.

I took a train and, getting off at the nearest station, drove to the house, prepared for a sad sight. Judging by his appearance when I had seen him last, he had probably strained some vital part, and I feared to find him forced to give up life as well as the army. On reaching the house I sent in my card and was ushered into his room.

There sat Charlie in an easy chair, surrounded by every luxury, puffing a fragrant cigar. His color was the healthiest, and his flesh was his usual 220 pounds. A white headed old lady went out of the room as I entered it and left us alone together.

"I've sent for you, old man," he said. "to get me out of a hole. I haven't yet been retired and am amenable to military discipline. In fact, I'm here without leave. I want you to go to Washington and fix matters up for me."

"I'll send a surgeon to see you. He'll give you a certificate, I suppose, of disability."

"No, he won't," replied Charlie. "I'm not sick."

"Well, then, what's the matter?" Charlie reached out, pushed a button, a maid appeared, and he told her to ask her mistress if she would honor him with her presence. In a few moments a pretty woman of about twenty-eight stepped into the room and stood, so to speak, at attention.

"That's what's the matter," said Charlie. "Mrs. Edgerton, permit me to present one of my most esteemed brother officers, Colonel Brewster, called sometimes B. Rooster by those who love him, a gentleman and a soldier every inch. Colonel, Mrs. Edgerton is to honor me with her hand. I retire from the army into matrimony."

I could have been knocked down with a feather. While all us fellows had been galloping over the country to prevent being retired the big, good natured, winsome, lazy St. Clair had dropped out of the race into the arms of a charming widow and a splendid fortune.

Mrs. Edgerton had taken pity on poor St. Clair from the day he had ridden up to her house and had given him both meat and drink. Every day after that he would say that he must be gone, and the widow would say that he was not yet recovered. Before he was considered out of danger he had proposed to and been accepted by the widow.

Since St. Clair's case has become known all the unmarried officers of the army wish to take the president's ride.

Are doctors good for anything?

Foolish question! Yet some people act as if a medicine could take the place of a doctor! The best medicine in the world cannot do this. Have a family doctor, consult him frequently. If we did not believe doctors endorsed Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for coughs and colds, we would not offer it to you.
